February Is Library Lover's Month @ (insert library name)

Okay library lovers, it is time to celebrate your love!

February is Love Your Library Month, and the staff and volunteers at (insert library name) want to feel your love. The month-long celebration provides plenty of time for you, your family, your friends, your colleagues, your neighbors and even the strangers around you to rediscover your local library.

Throughout the month, the library will help you recognize the important role that libraries play in the cultural and economic success of local communities like ours. Schools, colleges, corporations, government organizations, hospitals and law offices all depend on their specialized libraries to support their ongoing activities. But for the community-at-large – people seeking best-selling books for adults and kids, children's story times, research assistance and materials, public programs, access to computers and the Internet and other services – the local public library is the first place to visit. And during the month of February, (insert library name) wants to feel your love when you participate in the Love Your Library activities.

(Insert library name) is celebrating Love Your Library Month in the following ways:

(insert activities).

(Insert library name) offers this schedule of special Love Your Library Month activities to encourage residents of all ages to learn about the library's regular collections and services, as well as the special events regularly offered by your library.

For more information about the activities above and all other programs and materials available through the (insert library name), call (insert telephone number) or log on to the library's website at (insert web address).
