(insert name of library) Offers Home Improvement Information

Have you finally decided to tackle that home improvement task you've been putting off for a year? Before you head to the hardware store, you should probably head to your public library.

At (insert name of library), you'll find a wealth of resources about building, maintaining, repairing and improving your home and other buildings, as well as your garden and other outdoor spaces. The convenient automated catalog will direct you to books, CDs, government bulletins, videos and other resources to guide your way to taking out the old, putting in the new and keeping up with the wear and tear that time inflicts on all structures.

You'll find advice about the best ways to prepare for your project, the best materials and tools to use, comparative pricing information, and an array of designs that may make you even more ambitious. And you will find step-by-step how-to books that will make you more confident and your project more successful.

Among the many resources you will find at (insert name of library), are these: (insert specific resources).

Perhaps the best resource of all is the staff of library professionals and volunteers who are always ready to help you find the information you need. They may not be experienced at handling jackhammers, but they know how to help you find anything you need to know about the subject.

Helping you with home improvement tasks is Reason #5 on our list of 65 Reasons to Love Your Library. To see all 65 reasons and to add your own special thoughts about loving your library, visit us soon and take a look at the 65 Reasons to Love Your Library poster displayed in the library.

(insert name of library) is located at (insert address). Call (insert phone number) and check the website at (insert web address) for library hours and more information about the library's services and collections.
